saved to a CD-ROM. Multiple copies of the digital media can be stored both locally and remotely, assuring the owner that valuable information is safely backed up and easily retrievable in advance of a potentially tragic event.

“Too many households are not prepared in case of an emergency. Florida residents are especially vulnerable due to our long hurricane season,” said Janine McCabe, president of Good Deeds Scanning. “We typically procrastinate until the last minute, make simple preparations, lazy to gather all that’s truly important and are surprised when a disaster does indeed strike. Good Deeds Scanning takes the worry out of protection of valuable documents. We’re fast, reliable and provide peace-of-mind.”

Good Deeds Mobile Scanning serves both residential and commercial customers. Within minutes, the company scans and categorizes a customer’s important documents, such as home insurance policies, passports, estate planning documents, and banking and credit card information. An optional service includes the taking of photos of personal valuables for insurance purposes. Good Deeds provides 2 CD-ROM’s for the customer, recommending one copy be placed in a safety deposit box, and the other copy kept out of state.

Customer Mark Wright, owner of a title insurance company, has been using Good Deeds Scanning for his business operations for nearly 3 years. “The service Janine McCabe’s company offers is indispensable to me,” Wright, vice president of The Closing Agent, said. “Good Deeds Scanning provides my customers with a simple, searchable digital copy of up to 150 pages of title closing documents. Now my customers don’t have to worry about storing a mass of paper for 10 years. They’re on a single CD-ROM. It’s awesome.”
