FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Office Depot Foundation to Host September 18 ‘National Conversation’ on Collaboration between Non-Profit Organizations and Corporate America

WASHINGTON, D.C. (September 15, 2009) – The Office Depot Foundation will host a “National Conversation on Community Renewal” on Friday, September 18, 2009, from 9 a.m. to 11a.m. at the National Press Club in Washington, D.C. The conversation will explore compelling cases for closer collaboration between civil society organizations and corporate America.

Community leaders Rod Roberson (Common Council President/Elkhart, IN) and Ruben Barrales (President and CEO/San Diego Regional Chamber of Commerce) will participate in the conversation to illustrate the real-world impact of successful grassroots solutions to economic distress, natural disasters, and other challenges faced by local communities. Hal Roark (President, Roark and Associates/New Orleans, LA) also has been invited to participate. The conversation will be moderated by Jay Hein (President and CEO/the Sagamore Institute, Indianapolis). Mark Dobosz (Executive Director/SCORE Foundation, McLean, VA) also will take part in the event.

Office Depot Foundation President Mary Wong says that she hopes the National Conversation will “...draw attention to on-going struggles many communities still face...while also demonstrating that solutions don't always come from Capitol Hill – they also come from innovative citizen action within communities.”

The press conference and panel discussion will also address the importance of local cross-sector collaboration as well as the essential contribution of small and medium non-profit enterprises to solving the many challenges facing communities.

The national conversation follows the recent release of “The Business of the Civil Society Sector: Taking Care of Community” – a report co-authored by Jay Hein, Stephen Jordan (Executive Director/U.S. Chamber of Commerce's Business Civic Leadership Center) and Mary Wong (President/Office Depot Foundation). The paper was inspired by the “Weekend in Boca” – the annual meeting of the Office Depot Foundation Leadership Network in Boca Raton, Florida, which serves as a recurring focal point for cross-sector dialogue and its impact on American communities.
