Newly Redesigned Website Launches January 2010
With An Online Learning Environment ~ TLC

Therapy in Transition (TITO) launches a newly redesigned website providing membership privileged benefits such as private discussion forums moderated by a panel of experts dedicated to supporting member's personal and professional success and TITO's Learning Center or TLC where individuals can enroll in online courses to broaden their skills and knowledge.

Wilsonville, OR – December 29, 2009 Therapy in Transition has opened their newly redesigned website for beta testing. Individuals can access all areas of the website including those that will be limited to members only. Beta testers can view a complete course list available for enrollment now for classes beginning February 2010.

“Three months after launching our previously improved site,” TITO’s Co-Creative Director and Founder Karen Kleinwort explains “I knew we’d already out grown the site’s capabilities and began the journey of creating this new site to be more intuitive for the user as well as expand the functionality for its members.” With the newly designed site just a few weeks away from being launched, beta testers will have access to entire site which includes the a panel of experts who will be moderating forums to answer individual questions of the members personally; they will also have first choice of enrollment to courses through TLC prior to the general public and have the ability to read articles written specifically for TITO members to expand their knowledge in their quest for furthering their own personal and professional growth. During the beta testing period, online membership fees will be discounted to $100/year after the beta testing is complete the fees will be $15.99/month or $159.99/year.
