

If You Pay for an iDevice Repair, You're Paying Too Much, Says David, The iSmart Guy

"Restoring Your Technology To Its Fullest Potential"™

New entertaining YouTube video recently posted by iQue Repair, a National leader in the iPhone®, iPad® and iPod® repair industry and one of Utah's fastest growing businesses, declares that if you're paying deductibles on any iDevice extended warranties or other insurance plans, you're paying too much.

Salt Lake City, UT, January 2013 – iQue Repair (www.iquerepair.com), headquartered centrally in Utah, released a new YouTube video that not only entertains, it presents an incredible message that can save you precious resources.

iQue's video introduces David, "The iSmart Guy," and opens in front of their "Wall of Doom;" a sample collection of the 10,000 damaged Apple™ mobile devices already repaired by iQue Repair's specialized technicians.

The 2 minute video portrays humorous scenarios as David presents the case for iSmart Protection and asks, "Why pay deductibles when your iDevice can be repaired for free?"

David states, "The video is worth viewing from start to finish and we'd like everyone's help to get our message out nationwide to all current and future iDevice owners," and he concluded in the parting scene, "There's thousands of ways to damage your iDevice, but only one way to protect them... iSmart Protection. Think Repair, Not Replace."

iQue Repair (@IQUERPAIR) also announced earlier this week that they have teamed up with celebrity, Jef Holm (@JEFHOLM) and People Water to accelerate building water wells in third world countries through proceeds raised in their iSmart Monthly Plan campaign (click here to see that press release).
