Why do so many diversity programs fail?

Demographic shifts in age, gender, race, religion, nationality, sexual orientation and ethnicity are presenting organizational leaders with challenges and opportunities that many are not equipped to manage effectively. However, organizations will not survive in the global marketplace unless they proactively value the unique attributes of each of their employees. Dr. Conrad will uncover how to avoid the most common flaws of diversity programs so that organizations can build high- performing inclusive organizations.

Dr. Conrad’s Keynotes can be extended into a workshop or seminar, or customized into a half-day to multi-day program for both small and large audiences.

CUSTOMIZED SOLUTIONS

CONSULTING

Globalization, technological innovation, and rapid demographic change are just a few of the complicated factors that test today's organizational leaders. Although these challenges seem daunting, they bring with them a myriad of opportunities. Since the only true sustainable source of competitive advantage in today's economy is human capital, leaders need to possess well-developed intellectual abilities and equally impressive social and emotional skills to connect with their employees and help them reach their potential. The Conrad Consulting Group helps leaders use these skills to attract, develop, reward, and retain top talent.

TRAINING

The Conrad Consulting Group provides training on a variety of topics, each of which is essential to understanding how to maximize human potential and performance. During these programs, participants will learn to:

Communicate effectively (Eliminate the problems that result from misunderstandings).

Manage conflict (Create a more positive, collaborative workplace).

Manage change (Be flexible and more easily adapt to change).

Manage stress (Maintain control of emotions, no matter how tense the situation).

Understand human differences (Understand how emotions affect interactions).

"Our training experience with Dr. Jarik Conrad was exceptional. Our Staff gained greater insight into how the brain and emotions contribute to our views of others. By the end of our full-day retreat we had reached consensus on short term action steps that can move us closer to where we want to be. We look forward to having Dr. Conrad come back to assess our progress and keep us moving forward. All of our employees were excited by the day, fully engaged, and motivated to take action."

COACHING

The primary reason leaders get derailed is not because of deficient technical skills, but because of lack of social, emotional, and cultural-emotional intelligence. The Conrad Consulting Group offers one-on-one coaching for leaders seeking to improve upon these skills, which include self-awareness, assertiveness, conflict management, stress management, interpersonal relationships, and understanding diversity. Coaching is delivered through a combination of assessments, case studies, and on-the-job practice.

We asked Dr. Conrad to speak to ranking command officers from state and local police departments across Florida and employees of the FBI’s Jacksonville Division. He did an outstanding job with these two divergent groups including discussions about emotional intelligence, stress management, and change in the workplace...Your employees need to hear what Dr. Conrad has learned about the brain, people at work, and life.”
