

Adding value to your ERP implementation

We are now preventing delays leading to faster turnarounds and improved performance.
Duncan Green, Norland Managed Services

Market's today are dynamic and challenging. Customers are demanding lower prices, shorter delivery times and tailored systems and services with accurate, real-time information. Global competition and trying to keep costs down add to business pressures. Brand loyalty now comes with a much greater expectation of the complete shopping experience.

Today's wholesale organizations need to transform themselves from a traditional trading company into an information and service-oriented distribution business. In the world of discrete manufacturing a matrix of product variants, versions, changing specifications and the time-to-market is putting a lot of pressure on the business.

For project and service driven organizations, it is vital to keep tight control over the costs. And in the retail arena, today's consumers shop when and where it's most convenient while sharing their experiences on social media and checking online customer reviews when deciding what to buy.

Dynamics ERP Productivity offers a suite of accelerating tools to support business processes including distribution operations, complete manufacturing lifecycle, finance, project control, purchasing, human resources, customer relationship management, store operations, channel management, order management, marketing and care, business intelligence and much more.
