Ongoing technological improvements achieved by manufacturers in the cosmetic laser industry have led to greater applications of lasers for non-invasive cosmetic procedures. Previously, many of these procedures could only be achieved through surgery resulting in long patient downtime and costly medical bills.

As the variety of non-invasive cosmetic laser treatments continues to expand, more consumers are opting for non-invasive procedures. To keep up, medspas, dermatologists, physicians, plastic surgeons and other medical practitioners are expanding their laser technology service offerings as part of their treatment regiment for patients.

With the costs of operating in the medical field escalating, adding new equipment can become very expensive and sometimes cost prohibitive. Substantial savings can be achieved by investing in used cosmetic lasers. In addition to being more affordable, by purchasing used cosmetic lasers, practitioners can add several lasers rather than a single piece of equipment. This allows them to offer more services to their patients, many of whom are very savvy on aesthetic treatment options available in today's market.

Longevity Medical Group's expansion of used cosmetic lasers, used IPL equipment and used laser hand pieces started as the demand for used cosmetic lasers continues to grow.

Longevity Medical Group's owner Ron Zemp states, "The growing demand to purchase used aesthetic lasers has kept us so busy we need to open another location."

Investing in used equipment can be daunting as there is a legitimate concern for the integrity, reliability and the safety of the equipment for both the operators and patients.

All used cosmetic lasers purchased and placed into inventory by Longevity Medical Group undergo stringent testing and quality control procedures to ensure the performance of the cosmetic lasers they sell to their clients.

"Any equipment that does not meet these standards is then repaired to meet manufacturer's operating standards," says Ron Zemp. This quality control process has resulted in ongoing repeat business and many referrals. Longevity Medical Group is positioning their business for continued growth and looks forward to being a leader in the used cosmetic laser industry.
