The album cover is a work of art in itself, illustrated by the band themselves. In it each song is represented by its own graphic element within Tangowhiskyman's universe. Both the name of the album "The Wait" and the title track can be seen in the hourglass that adorns the neck of the magician, who represents the main character, Mr. Tangowhiskyman. We can also see a

"Head Full of Voices" encased in an ion box, as well as a portal that represents "Peter Pan", the Yin Yang for the track "Busy Living" and the four elements in the song "Element".

The album begins with the epic track "Peter Pan", an introduction that draws us into the expansive world of The Wait and the character's alter-ego Tangowhiskyman. The album's title track offers a moment of psychedelic kraut-rock while the song "A Conversation" brings us a trap beat with an embellished funky rhythm that is marked by a heavy bass. "No Regret" captivates with borderline tropical horns and rhythms of high intensity.

Their release of the single Head Full of Voices received more than 150,000 streams on youtube and they are growing fast on social media @tangowhiskyman.
