

CSOC UT Austin Welcomes Community to Special Seminar: Nov. 13

WHEN LIFE GETS HARD, FAITH GETS REAL.

Christian Students on Campus (CSOC UT Austin), a student Christian club at The University of Texas at Austin is hosting a special community event to explore how trials in our lives deepen our trust in God and make faith a living experience.

Faith isn't just believing when everything makes sense; faith empowers us to trust and believe in God even when life feels broken.

This seminar dives into what it means to trust God when things don't go as planned—when faith moves from theory to experience. Building on the foundation of the first two CSOC Seminar events this semester, “What is Faith” and “How Faith Works,” we will discuss how God uses even the hardest moments to deepen our faith and make it more than just a concept—something living, active and real in our lives.

Join Christian Students on Campus in welcoming our special guest Dr. Michael Reardon, (PhD, University of Toronto) academic dean and professor of New Testament and historical theology at Canada Christian College and School of Graduate Theological Studies. His recent publications include Transformed into the Same Image: Constructive Investigations into the Doctrine of Deification (IVP Academic), The Seed of Abraham: Intersections of Jewish and Christian Thought (Wipf&Stock), and several articles examining the Trinity, salvation, and biblical interpretation. Dr. Michael Reardon will join us in an open dialogue about how faith becomes living and real in the midst of trials and suffering.

CSOC invites the University of Texas at Austin community to join us at the third event in the Fall 2025 CSOC Seminar Series to dive into how faith is made real in our everyday lives.

Attendance is free and refreshments will be provided.

Bring questions, there will be an open Q&A!
