

REXOLOGY

The Way of a Warrior in the New Millennium

By
Reginald W. Davis

Published by
Rexology Press
Birmingham, Alabama
<http://www.RexologyPress.com>

Front Cover Design, Illustrations and Tables

By

Reginald W. Davis

Cover Photos: Hubble Ultra Deep Field

Courtesy of NASA and the Space Telescope Science Institute

SECOND EDITION

Copyright © 2007 Rexology Press. All rights reserved worldwide. No part of this book maybe copied or sold in any form except by written permission of the publisher.

Published by

Rexology Press

Birmingham, Alabama

<http://www.RexologyPress.com>

ISBN: 978-0-6151-4566-2

Library of Congress Control Number: 2007928587

CONTENTS

Foreword	15
Introduction	19
Chapter One
A Person of Knowledge and Power	22
Chapter Two
Self and Human Nature	30
Chapter Three
The Four Ways to Consciousness	43
Chapter Four
The Three Areas of Human Experience	72
Chapter Five
Cosmology and Cosmological Convictions	96
Index	117

PREVIEW

It is human nature to wonder, to reason, and to act. They are natural drives, like sex and hunger. Wondering and inductive logic gave rise to myth, philosophy, and science through “cosmological convictions.” This means having a deep belief in the order of the universe. Myth or mysticism deals with the most basic beliefs, concepts, and attitudes of an individual or group. It is the belief that one can attain direct knowledge of God through subjective experiences, such as intuition or insight. It asserts that God, or the gods, gave order to the universe. It place people at the center of the cosmos, examples are:

1. “The Genesis Story” as told in the Bible.
2. The Babylonians “Enuma Elish” - the gods created humans to serve them.
3. The Babylonians “Gilgamesh Epic” - no eternal life, do what you have to do.

Philosophy is a way of life, or a system of values by which one lives - based on intellectual means and moral self-discipline. Philosophy asks speculative questions in a logical order, and yields rational answers through reflective thinking - reason. This leaves us open rationally to the many possibilities in life. Other benefits of philosophy include:

1. It helps us to understand people of different times.
2. It teaches us how to make decisions when we are not sure.
3. It helps us to see why we act the way we do.
4. It has tools to help us make value judgments more rationally.

Science is the study of the nature and behavior of the physical universe. In science, you observe and experiment. This leads to the objective discovery of natural laws that affect the whole universe. This takes humans away from the center of the cosmos. Aristotle (384-322 BC) was an ancient Greek philosopher, and the scientist who founded physics. He was a student of Plato (427-347 BC) and the teacher of Alexander the Great (356-323 BC). Aristotle asserted that all knowledge must begin with observation. However, in his natural philosophy, God functioned as the final cause of condition for the cosmos. This view represented the scientific community until about 1600 AD.

Galileo Galilei (1564-1642) was an Italian naturalist philosopher, mathematician, physicist, and astronomer. He is the “father of modern astronomy,” and the “father of modern physics.” He asserted that all knowledge comes from observation. However, you cannot observe God. In addition, measurements are quantitative. This means we do not have to know the final cause of motion and change. The scientific world is a secular or non-religious world. Science asserts there is no supernatural destiny. Man is a part of nature, which is not divine. Do you have cosmological convictions? How do you express them in your life? Should science replace myth and philosophy - why or why not?

In life, I found many people who thought their way was the right way. As a Christian, I wondered, “How do you tell and convince others that Jesus Christ is the way?” This led to my question, “With all the different thoughts, beliefs, religions, and sciences; how do you know what path to follow in order to find self-actualization (The fulfillment of your total potential) and spiritual-fulfillment (Having values and beliefs, as to right and wrong, such that you are willing to live or die for)?” In order to find the answer, you must look both within yourself and without. By examining yourself objectively, you begin to understand yourself. This leads to the understanding of others. By looking outward objectively, you begin to understand your relationship to the world around you and your possibilities in it.

“REXOLOGY: The Way of a Warrior in the New Millennium” is about the search for truth, knowledge, and understanding. Understanding the knowledge you have acquired gives you the ability to apply it. This ability to apply knowledge makes you “a person of knowledge and power.”

Becoming a person of knowledge and power will lead you to new levels of consciousness. As you increase your consciousness, you increase your capacity to accept and handle both knowledge and power. Here are “four tasks” that will help you to accomplish this goal:

1. The “first task” is to come to know self. Your concept of who you are determines how you perceive and relate to the world. Chapter 2, “Self and Human Nature,” describes this task.
2. The “second task” is to develop your consciousness. As you increase your consciousness, you increase your capacity to accept and handle both knowledge and power. Chapter 3, “The Four Ways to Consciousness,” describes this task. It also describes several techniques of meditation, which allows us to experience things in a fuller way. In addition, it includes a technique called “self-remembering.” Self-remembering enables you to feel and act freely from your essence. This is what it means to be ones’ self.
3. The “third task” is to interact with the world around you on a conscious level. You become an observer of yourself, and learn about yourself, as you learn about the world around you. Chapter 4, “The Three Areas of Human Experience,” describes this task.
4. The “fourth task” is to learn to see yourself, and the world around you, from a cosmological point of view. A true cosmological point of view will allow you to satisfy your threefold nature of body, soul, and spirit (regardless of your religion). Chapter 5, “Cosmology and Cosmological Convictions,” describes this task.

This is a book of esoteric knowledge. By definition, this is knowledge of the few. However, for those who can hear and understand it may unlock their full potential. It will help you to develop, or become more aware of your beliefs and convictions. In addition, it will help you to see who and what you truly are.